Hello Bunbury Children,

I am writing to you as this would have usually been the last day of our Easter holidays. However, things are not usual at the moment and we find that we are going to be parted from each other for a little while longer. You are all doing a fantastic job of doing the task I set you all those weeks ago by staying safely at home to help stop the spread of the virus.

I miss you all terribly and the school is so quiet and still without all your smiling faces and cries of laughter filling our corridors. It is not how schools are supposed to be. I long to hear and see you once more and I know that day will come soon. Until then we will have to stay apart for a while longer but when we are back together things will be even better than they were before.

I don't want you to worry about the bug which is making some people sick as the doctors, nurses are working so hard to make people better and our scientists are trying to find a cure. The people in charge know that these people can look after us better and find a cure quicker if we stay apart for a while longer. So, we must be brave and do what they say for a few weeks more. Please make sure you continue to talk to your grown-ups though, about any worries you have, they can help you.

Your teachers are still working hard teaching and caring for you as they have always done, this will just be in a different way for a little while. They will be talking to you through our new Padlet, helping you with your work and most importantly checking that you are ok.

I too will be checking in on our Padlet and talking with your teachers about how you are all doing. You are all very special to Mrs Badger and I never want you to forget that.

Please carry on being the strong, brave and resilient little people that I know you are. Listen to your mum and dad, phone your grandparents and be kind to each other. Help around the house if you can. I am so full of pride for how positive and generally incredible every one of our 170 children have been. Their love for learning has not stopped one bit and you really are '@BUNBURY ACE'!

Take care and stay safe
Love

Mrs Badger
